

Mosquito Patrol Game

This game can be played outside or inside depending on the space available. It is best played with 10 or more. Set “house rules” before you begin about how players may break through the circle to avoid injuries. Set a time limit.

Players hold hands in a circle. One player is on the outside of the circle and is called the parasite, and one player is the mosquito and stands on the inside of the circle. The parasite tries to break through the circle to get to the mosquito. The players in the circle try to prevent the parasite from getting to the mosquito. When the parasite breaks through the circle, the players in the circle on either side of the break are the next mosquito and parasite. The one on the right is the mosquito and the one on the left is the parasite.
